Motivation. Having 2 different ages and needs. Balancing extended family other commitments alongside home learning.

Finding time to assist with learning while both of us are working full time.

Work patterns prevent us from spreading the learning over the week so English has to be compressed into a few days by one of us and then maths into the remaining days. With the English being a continuous progression over weeks its not possible for the one to pick up from the other person in order to carry on smoothly.

Is there anything else you'd like to share regarding home learning provision or home/school contact?

Very happy with what has been provided under these extraordinary circumstances.

We would prefer the packs provided by the school, as the tutorials are not very helpful and (Child) finds it very difficult to stay focused while watching them. They can be very boring and disjointed.

The only thing I think that is very annoying is the way class dojo is set out, having to scroll back through so many videos and posts can be a pain to find what you want! Having the laptop has made a big difference to settling down with work which is great.

Nothing lacking on provision or contact however I feel if the English learning was provided/structured more like the maths where some of it is on sheets with easier to follow instruction, then our child would be able to put down more of her own thoughts and ideas with less input or help from us. It would make the whole thing easier on them rather than us trying to tell them when to make notes so that future lessons that week are understandable and the lessons wouldn't take perhaps twice as long as they should.

If you have any questions, do not hesitate to contact the school.
